CREATIVE SOCIAL CLUB

Busy hands, open conversations.

A night out with no stage, no audience and no pressure to be good. Each session a young host shares a craft they love, and everyone, from seasoned makers to first-timers, makes something together.

HOW IT WORKS

A different young host leads each session, supported by a YANZ facilitator who looks after the room. Materials are provided, there's light kai, and no experience is needed. Registration is free.

WHO IT'S FOR

Young people who love the arts but might not call themselves artists, and anyone after a low-key reason to get out of the house and meet people in their community with shared and new perspectives.

WHY IT MATTERS

Young people are going out less, and much of what's on offer is built around drinking or performing. Creative Social Club is a warm, sober room where making something is the point.

WHERE IT LEADS

Hosting is a paid first step into teaching and facilitating, then on to workshops, Live Personalised Art and Rangatahi on Stage work, and a seat at Youth Voice Hui. For guests, it's an easy way into the wider YANZ community.

The only rule: be curious, make something, and don't be precious about being good.
