FREELANCER FRIDAYS

Freelancing is better together.

A regular community day for young creative freelancers to co-work, connect and grow their networks. Freelancing young can be lonely. This gives rangatahi a regular place to land.

HOW FREELANCER FRIDAYS WORKS

Bring your laptop and your to-do list.

Snacks and hot drinks provided

WHAT IT IS

A free, drop-in co-working day for anyone running their own creative schedule: designers, musicians, writers, photographers, makers. Talk freely, or put your headphones on and lock in.

WHO IT'S FOR

Young freelance creatives, and anyone in charge of their own working hours who'd rather not spend another day working alone.

HOW IT WORKS

Drop in whenever suits during the afternoon. We start with quick introductions and goals on a shared whiteboard, then everyone gets to work. Through the afternoon people share tips, show work in progress and help each other out. Crossing something off the whiteboard is half the fun.

WHERE IT LEADS

Artists and crew sort invoices between gigs, and new faces meet the YANZ team and find their way into paid work.

What people have helped each other with

Pricing · CVs · Templates · Grant applications · Headshots

LESS ALONE

"As a freelancer I often work alone, it was nice to share the space with other creatives."
