

YOUTH VOICE HUI

Rangatahi setting the direction.

Young people in the arts from communities across Aotearoa, talking about what they're seeing where they live: what's working, what's missing, and what they want more of. Then we act on it.

HOW YOUTH VOICE HUI WORKS

We listen, then we act on it.

Paid, with koha and a facilitator

WHAT IT IS

A paid, facilitated hui with a rotating group of rangatahi: long-time YANZ artists, people new to us, and voices we don't usually hear from. What's said is written up to shape our programmes and what we push for in the sector.

HOW IT WORKS

We bring a group together, in person or online, with a facilitator, koha and a clear question. Rangatahi talk freely and bring their own questions. We write up what we heard and share it back, so people can see where their ideas went.

WHO IT'S FOR

Rangatahi with something to say about the arts in their community. And councils, venues and organisations who want to hear from young people before they plan a space or a programme.

WHERE IT LEADS

What they tell us shapes the next season of open mics, gigs and programmes. The hui builds young leaders: for many it's a first taste of advocacy, leading a conversation and having a say in their sector.

WHAT THEY TOLD US IN 2022

- Creative identity belongs to all rangatahi
- Accessibility and safety are non-negotiable
- Built by communities, for communities
- Impact must last
